COMING ATTRACTIONS

NUMBER 48 NOVEMBER, 1980

INFANTINO & ANDERSON REUNITED ON ADAM STRANGE!

The most popular comics art team of the sixties was the Carmine Infantino/Murphy Anderson collaboration on Adam Strange in the first run of MYSTERY IN SPACE! Now, DC is proud to announce that the past lives again as Infantino and Anderson are reunited for a special assignment: an Adam Strange story for GREEN LANTERN, where the champion of Rann now hails in stories written by Laurie Sutton.

Carmine Infantino has recently returned to the drawing board for DC and in upcoming months his work will be appearing in DETECTIVE COMICS #500 (a special Batman/Deadman team-up), the new MYSTERY IN SPACE, and, on a regular basis, THE FLASH. Editor Jack C. Harris wanted to make this Adam Strange story special, so Murphy Anderson was persuaded to take time out from his other projects to ink the eight-page tale! The result is a story that is sure to make the issue a collector's item, one that should not be missed in GREEN LANTERN #137.

And in the same issue, Green Lantern joins forces with Space Ranger to battle alien enemies from two different time periods in a tale by Marv Wolfman and Joe Staton. It's 25 pages of interstellar artistic excitement...on sale November 25th!

...DITKO PENCILS TALE OF NEW MEMBER IN THE LEGION!

There's a new member in the Legion of Super-Heroes, the first in a number of years and his thrilling origin can be learned in LEGION #272, on sale November 25th. Steve Ditko provides the 25 pages of art to complement Gerry Conway's script for "The Origin of Blok" as a former foe of the Legion becomes one of their staunchest allies.

And extra Legion excitement is due in the second installment of SECRETS OF THE LEGION OF SUPER-HEROES, DC's newest miniseries, on sale November 13th. Among the secrets revealed this time by E. Nelson Bridwell, Paul Kupperberg and Jimmy Janes is the startling truth about Legion sponsor Rene J. Brande. Don't miss this collector's item!

CHALLENGERS OF THE UNKNOWN RETURN!

It's a team-up plus a team-up as the World's Finest pair, Superman and The Batman, joins forces with the Challengers of the Unknown to battle "The Gravity Masters" in WFC #267. Cary Burkett and Rich Buckler provide the action as the Fearless Four are back when the issue goes on sale November 13th. And that's hardly all that's included in this Dollar Comic. Black Canary is back in solo action, investigating a death caused by a policewoman in "With This Gun...I Thee Slay" by Bob Haney and Trevor VonEeden; Hawkman gets a new penciller, Alex Saviuk, to work with writer Bob Rozakis and inker Rodin Rodriguez in "The Insect Invasion of Midway City"; J.M. DeMatteis and Jose Delbo show Red Tornado "Future Shock"; and it's the grand finale of Captain Marvel's battle with the new Monster Society of Evil in this issue's Shazam tale by E. Nelson Bridwell and Don Newton.

On the subject of team-ups, The Batman is sent into the past by Professor Nichols so that he can join forces with Scalphunter in BRAVE & BOLD #171, thanks to Gerry Conway and Jose Luis Garcia Lopez. And Nemesis is in Las Vegas to battle the syndicate in this issue's back-up tale.

Superman and Black Canary are the headliners in DC COMICS PRESENTS #30, courtesy of Conway and Curt Swan, as "A Dream of Demons" turns into a waking nightmare. Plus: Rozakis, Saviuk and Vince Colletta show "Whatever Happened to the Golden Age Atom?" as the Earth-Two Mighty Mite suddenly finds he has the power to shrink to microscopic size.

TEEN TITANS BATTLE THE JUSTICE LEAGUE!

It's the newly-reunited Teen Titans battling their mentors in THE NEW TEEN TITANS #4 as Marv Wolfman, George Perez and Romeo Tanghal combine their talents for another episode of our latest, greatest super-team. What's behind this heroes versus heroes slugfest? The answers are revealed on November 13th, when this issue goes on sale.

And over in their own magazine, the JLAers find Zatanna getting a brand-new look when "Proteus Says: All Things Must Change" in a story by Gerry Conway, Don Heck and Frank McLaughlin.
